

PROGRAM OVERVIEW

This is the only program of its kind in the region, and one of the few Music Departments in the nation to focus on styles of popular music, and targets Singer/Songwriters who perform their original compositions. Many composition programs exist, but ours focuses on students performing their own compositions, in addition to preparing them to write for other artists. Students develop performance and songwriting skills to enter a highly competitive market as both singers and instrumental accompanists. More informal than a conservatory, our program fosters a supportive and collaborative community.

Because of the vibrant downtown location, with the ready availability of other professional musicians in Denver's thriving urban music scene students network extensively outside the classroom with their fellows, their faculty, and various venues in the area. With their accessibility to students as well as their professional connection to the local, national and international music scene, our faculty are extraordinary resources and mentors for students. Students develop the skills to live their dream of working as professional touring and recording musicians, performing nationally and internationally. In addition, our Singer/Songwriter graduates are uniquely qualified to succeed in music publishing, to work as song pluggers, perform in combos and as studio musicians, write jingles, work in media, teach private lessons, and to be community music leaders. Further, many of our Music graduates find success at the graduate level, studying advanced music performance, musicology, and music education.

This program is appreciative of and sensitive to all styles and genres; however, it is not designed for students whose primary interest is electronic music composition.
